

This is indeed great news for our Valley's farms and economy. I have said time and again this biological opinion is flawed, has not helped the fish, and has dealt a crushing blow to the lives of very real people, costing our residents their livelihoods, lifestyles and their hope for their children.

It is important that we continue in the days ahead to press forward to ensure our farms and farm communities continue to receive all the needed supplies of water available, even after this injunction expires."
